Fantastic--now someone make the show!By Bo CusterA lightning-paced parody of both sci-fi and hospital shows, perhaps the best part about this book is attempting to visualize the (non-existant) TV show. Clark clearly wants it to be an impossible task, as the scene descriptions typically include enough sci-fi technobabble that it would make even the teams at ILM cry.Clark's hilarious parodies of sci-fi are too on-the-mark to have been written by someone who wasn't a sci-fi fan themselves. However, the scripts are full of inside jokes about doctors and their idiosyncracies that I'm convinced that he must have worked for a doctor at some point. Memories odd jobs I held at a doctor's office during a few summers at college (many years ago) came rushing back to me with comic vengeance. Basically, a great concept combined with very funny writing--I really enjoyed it. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Great premise - entertaining execution By Bonnie Cyl I was hooked with the unique concept from the opening lines. The scripts and other text are clever, well-written, thought-provoking, and often really, really funny. I loved the style and presentation of the photos. This is a book that I'm sure I'll keep and keep reading to find one more idea I missed the first time through.

This book contains eleven original scripts and over thirty color and black-and-white photos from this classic 1962 science fiction television series. The book is edited and introduced by eminent television historian Pushman Clark, nephew to series creator Ensign Clark.

From the Author The story of this book began on a hot summer day in 1962, when, as a 12-year-old boy, I was hired (at the salary of one chocolate ice cream cone) by my uncle to be an actor on his latest project -- a "television series" that he (jokingly) called "The Bloody Great Space Monster." My job: to meow like a cat and bite Joshua Flint (Doctor Stilts) on the leg. It was a strange experience, to say the least -- but it spurred a lifelong interest in that bizarre and intriguing medium known as "television." Now, thirty years later, my dream of bringing my uncle's unique vision alive again for a brand new generation, has come true. I hope the journey into the realm of possibility -- and beyond -- is as thrilling for you as it has been for me. About the Author San Francisco native (and Master Tailor for men's clothier Grimacci Aunts) Pushman Clark is a respected television historian and author of numerous articles on television history, some of which have appeared in such esteemed publications as The New Bohemian and Mosaica in Print. The Adventures of Damion Koehkh, MD: Space Doctor is first book-length project.
